Jarrow Community Mourns Death of Mrs. Earl Moore

Jarro and community were saddened to hear Friday morning that Mrs. Earl Moore of Tofteld had passed away. Although never a very strong woman it came as a distinct shock to her many relatives and friends.

Mrs. Moore had lived in the Batts district for several years, always taking an active part in the church and Sunday school work.

She was laid to rest on Sunday afternoon in the Jarro cemetery.

Words cannot fittingly describe nor pay proper tribute to the beautiful character of Mrs. Moore. Her moral standard was in perfect accord with that laid down by her Lord and Maker. She was kind and sympathetic. The distressed always found in her a helpful friend. She will be greatly missed by a large circle of true friends. Much sympathy is extended to her husband, John and Hazel, and other relatives.

Beautiful floral tributes were received from The Francis family; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cookson; Mrs. Jno. W. Francis; Miss Forester and Miss Burnett; Mrs. E. Demers and A. J. Moore and family; Mr. and Mrs. Lovell and family; Mrs. Burnett and family; Uncle John Willis; Hazel's Sunday school Class, Tofteld; The Junior S. S. News From The Capital

By T. B. Windross

Edmonton, Alta., Sept. 12th.—The provincial public works department has contracted for the construction of 100 miles of roadway on the Jasper and Trans-Canada highway, the work to begin at once. Standard grading, to make ready for graveling, is called for in four projects that will total over a million cubic yards of excavation.

Tenders were opened Friday and awards of contracts were announced Saturday. The four projects are as follows: Edson to Pelly on the Jasper highway, 18 miles; Pelly to the boundary of Jasper Park, 25 miles; On the Trans-Canada highway 30 miles west of Cochrane to the boundary of Banff park, and Strathmore to Calgary, 27 miles.

An alleged lottery was raided by the police in Scania last night. The raid was made on 100 people who were gathered in the hall to await the results witnessed the arrest of two men who were managing the affair by the police. The men were blindfolded and just in the act of drawing out of two jars the winning tickets.

Some bright youths thought to have a little fun regardless of what it would cost other people, one day last week in Edmonton. They gathered together a quantity of slightly over-ripe fruit and commenced to fling it at the lily white walls of a house on 88th Avenue, with disastrous results. The owner of the house telephoned the police, saying his house was daubed with colorful but putrid blotches. Constable Taylor responded to the complaint and found the clever youths still at their pranks with the fruit and the wall. He put a stop to the fun and made the boys clean the mess all up. That wasn't so much fun.

The newly renovated and furnished Memorial Hall in Edmonton was reopened officially in an impressive ceremony, last week, by Brig.-Gen. Alex Ross, C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D., K.C., dominion president of the Canadian Legion. The general stressed the need for the same sort of real leadership as characterized the Canadian corps in France, during an address he gave. He addressed the Edmonton Military Institute, Friday night.

Freighting 40 huskies, seven trappers and about 14,000 lbs. of supplies and equipment into the Barren lands east of Fort Reliance, on the eastern shore of Great Slave Lake, is being done by aeroplane this week. Pilot Con Farrell will do the work. Already much of the load has been taken in.

Rain, copious and frequent, prevented the McLarnin-Ross bout at New York. The date was set for next Saturday, after a couple of postponements. The Canadian is making an effort to regain his title, and while he carries the small end of the betting, a big bag of hopes goes with him.

The death of C. L. Gibbs, labor member of the Alberta legislature, which occurred at Sault Ste Marie, during the last week, leaves a vacancy in the house and weakens the Labor party representation, but it is not likely that a by-election will be held as there is only one session left for the present parliament before a general election is held. All parties seem to be anxious to avoid a by-election, so as to conserve their efforts for the general election, which must come off next year.

History of Depressions

In Past Told In Brief

You must always have something with which to draw a comparison. Therefore, when we wonder how long the present depression will continue, we turn to the past to see how long former spells of hard times lasted.

In the last hundred years we are told there have been thirteen major depressions and six or seven minor ones.

Depression in 1869 lasting for 3 months.

Depression in 1873 lasting for 30 months.

Depression in 1884 lasting for 20 months.

Depression in 1887 lasting for 10 months.

Depression in 1893 lasting for 25 months.

Depression in 1903 lasting for 25 months.

Depression in 1907 lasting for 12 months.

Depression in 1914 lasting for 8 months.

Depression in 1921 lasting for 14 months.

Now, the notable feature about these panics is that every one of them has been followed by flush times and the longer the depression lasted the longer and more active was the reign of prosperity that followed.

Decline In Cheese Exports

Canada Is Losing Market Of United Kingdom

What has happened to Canada's exports of cheese to the market of the United Kingdom is clearly indicated in a statement of the Bureau of Statistics at Ottawa that during the first six months of the present year our shipments of cheese to that market actually fell to fifth place with only 30,842 cwt. being forwarded across the Atlantic. In contrast with this, New Zealand remained in first place in the British market with 1,316,700, Australia being second with 67,050, the Netherlands third with 61,099 and Italy fourth with 50,928. Two years ago, for the corresponding period, Canada was in third place, coming behind New Zealand and Holland, and prior to the war Canada's supply of cheese to Great Britain was more than double that of New Zealand.

A further statement of the Bureau reports that during the year 1933 Canada's production of factory cheese experienced a further drop, totalling 111,044,628 pounds, or eight per cent. The total value of the cheese made was $11,113,918, a decrease of two per cent, the average factory price per pound having advanced from 9.44 cents in 1932 to 10.01 cents in 1933. On the other hand, the production of creamy butter in the Dominion rose to 218,532,307 pounds, an increase over the preceding year of two per cent.

It is evident that Canada is continuing to lose her grip upon the British cheese market, where once she was supreme, and if things continue at the present rate it will be only a matter of time before she has been swept off that market by the force of New Zealand's competition—Brookville Recorder and Times.

Discover New Rays

Eight Death-Dealing Rays Discovered By Woman Scientist

Eight death-dealing rays of ultraviolet light have been identified by Dr. Florence E. Meier, young woman scientist of the Smithsonian Institution.

The work completed by Miss Meier, hailed as a valuable addition to the important study of animal reactions to various rays, reveals the new killing rays as a group of the normally beneficial violet ray group, which are known to cure rickets.

Humans would not be slain by the newly discovered rays, but they are certain death to green algae, the one-celled plants that grow in lakes and rivers.

Or Even A House

Soviet Claims Scouted

Claims from Moscow that Russia had usurped second place among the world's gold producing countries, superseding Canada, has been received with almost universal scepticism. Apparently, the statement has been interpreted as just another of the efforts in propaganda with which Soviet authorities key their nationals to further sacrifices, but which singularly fail to impress the outside world.

During progress of the first five year plan, Moscow deluged the world with claims of amazing achievement, which, now that the ardors of the period have subsided, are being assessed at their true worth. There is no gainsaying the great advances made in certain industries, particularly the so-called heavy industries, under the program initiated by Lenin and carried into effect by Stalin. In some instances these have been spectacular, but (and this is the reason) have been quite as significant or outstanding as the claims made concerning them.

Several of the leading magazines and newspapers of Britain and America are devoting considerable space to reviewing the Soviet industrial and agricultural achievement. These have been equitable, unprejudiced and, probably based upon the true facts, for truth and not antagonistic propaganda is what the public seeks these days. The claims made on behalf of socialized endeavor by proponents of Socialism of the Russian variety, apparently do not stand the test of statistical investigation. Alan Monkhouse, one of the British engineers sacrificed for propaganda purposes in the notorious sabotage trials of a year or so ago, in a book of his experiences in Russia is surprisingly sympathetic to the Soviet planning scheme in the light of the circumstances preceding his deportation. Paying some attention to the statistical record of industrial achievement, he shows that the Soviet government's own figures in specialized lines such as house building do not compare favorably with similar achievements in capitalist and individualistic England, recorded at the same time. He cites several particulars in which Soviet authorities claimed to have out-distanced their degenerate and collapsing capitalist contemporaries, which are not substantiated by the facts.

Apparently, the same is true of the gold production, backed by Russia threats that, having overtaken Canada they will shortly overtake and pass South Africa in production of the precious metal. In reply to this, Canadian mining authorities maintain that, while undoubtedly Russia has been creeping up in production, it has not yet supplanted Canada as ranking second in production of newly mined gold. Much of the Russian gold, it is claimed, was withdrawn from hoarding and, therefore, it is old gold reclaimed.

South Africans scoff at what they term a bombastic claim, and have no fear of losing premier place among the world's gold producers. This contention is backed by Dr. P. S. Nazarov, formerly a famous Russian geologist and now a fugitive from the Bolsheviks. His statement, based on actual knowledge of the various Russian goldfields and not upon political bias, is to the effect that nowhere in Russia do gold-laden bodies occur with the regularity and in the volume seen on the Rand in South Africa. "If Russian gold fields ever reach the stage of providing competition for South Africa it will be at tremendous cost of time and labor of transportation," he concludes.

Salvaging Gold From Chimney

U.S. Assay Office Reclaims It From The Soot

Since the U.S. government devaluated the dollar, almost doubling the dollar value of every scrap of gold, the Assay office in New York has been using every conceivable precaution in its melting room to conserve the metal. The Assay office is housed in a relatively new building, white and severe, at the corner of Old Slip and South Street. One of its important installations is called a fume precipitator—in reality, a series of metal sleeves, each plumb by a chain. Alternating currents run through the chains and the sleeves; and, as smoke passes up the chimney, the soot particles, containing minute quantities of gold, are dashed from the air by this electric barrage, and fall to the bottom of the flue. This precious residue is collected once or twice a year by men who go into the basin of the chimney and shovel it out. The Assay office realizes $10,000 to $15,000 on the sale of gold reclaimed from chimney soot. Even the dust on the walls is collected for gold.

Easy To Remember

The debate over "I" and "me" goes on unendingly, but there is one thing that we ought to stop. It is the phrase, "between you and I." If the people who use it would reverse the pronouns and say "between I and you," they might learn to use the correct form, but every day we hear from the most unexpected sources the heart-rendering "between you and I." The correct form, of course, is "between you and me."

Change of Climate, Diet, Water Often the Cause of Diarrhoea

This bowel complaint remedy has been on the market for the past 88 years. Proof enough that you are not experimenting with some new and untried medicine.

Do not accept a substitute. Get "Dr. Fowler's" when you ask for it, and be on the safe side.

Was In Two Rebellions

Alberta Veteran Carried Despatches For General Strange

In Alberta 50 years ago, when highwaymen were just fading from the western frontier with the coming of the first Northwest Mounted Police, and when Indians were still on the warpath often, Charles F. Stewart drove the mail stage. Now 69 and retired, he lives at Edmonton.

Native of the prairies, he saw two rebellions at first hand. Son of the chief factor of the Hudson's Bay Co., he was a lad of eight and lived a few miles below Fort Garry (later Winnipeg) in the troubled days of the first Red River rebellion. He can recall seeing the soldiers coming up the Red river. As a youth of 20, when the mails were stopped by the Saskatchewan rebellion of 1885, he went on the courier line, carrying dispatches for General Strange's Alberta field force. He made several trips on horseback between Saddle Lake and Fort Pitt.

His predecessor on the mail job, Peter Campbell, was on the driver's seat when the Calgary coach was held up and the mails robbed by highwaymen in the only case of its kind in this part of the west.

It was no picturesque coach that was in use in 1891 but a lumber wagon with an open centre for package freight and a closed cabin on the rear that accommodated six passengers. An average of 40 miles of trail was covered each day by the plodding team and numerous creeks and streams were forded en route.

Proposed Tax On Noise

Idea Of British Minister Of Transport May Save Nerves

A tax on noise is proposed to save the nerves of the people of the United Kingdom. It is thought that taxation may succeed where appeals have failed in the matter of unnecessary noise, and the suggestion of a tax was made in a letter from Leslie Hore-Belisha, minister of transport, which was read at a conference of the Anti-Noise League at Oxford.

"All new heavy motor cars put on the road since January, 1933, have to be fitted with pneumatic tires," he wrote, "and the scales of taxation have been so framed as to give a strong incentive to people to substitute pneumatic tires on existing vehicles. The heavy vehicle on solid tires which caused so much unnecessary noise in the past is rapidly disappearing."

"Regulations also forbid the use of motor vehicles and trailers which have caused excessive noise, and the sounding of horns on stationary vehicles."

"The road traffic bill proposed further to prohibit the use of the horn in prescribed hours and zones of silence." Mr. Hore-Belisha stated that in order to gain exact knowledge of what really causes noise the ministry has invoked the best scientific assistance. He expressed the hope the motor manufacturing industry will co-operate with the government in a determined effort to find a remedy for present unnecessary and harmful noises.

Rebuilding Viking Boat

Oak Timbers Intact After Being Submerged Thousand Years

A Viking boat has been "reconditioned" at Danzig, after one thousand years. Workmen engaged in digging a ditch at Oliva found the remains of the boat only five feet beneath the surface of the ground. The sturdy oak planks of which the boat was originally built had defied the ravages of time so successfully that it has been possible to reconstruct the vessel in its entirety. The boat is thirty feet long, with places for eighteen oarsmen. Iron nails had been used in the making, as well as wooden pegs. Parts of the sun-wales, with the original rowlocks, have survived, and much of the moss with which the seams were packed to make them water-tight is still in place.

Wine must come from a limited area of France to be legally called champagne.

Talk About Economy

Two Towns In Bulgaria Have Everything Else Beaten

There is a legend current in the picturesque little Balkan town of Panaghuriste that when God once was bestowing his gifts, he allotted close-steadiness to the inhabitants of two towns—Gabrovo and Panaghuriste, stressing it more generously on the latter because of its weird and unpronounceable name.

On that account the parsimoniousness of either town has become proverbial. And they are dire rivals in that respect to this day.

In both localities men do not shave their beards, being too expensive a matter, but sing them by various devices which makes the beard stay smooth. In both towns families make use of but one spoon or fork, passing either of them around when taking their meals which they argue, saves extra labor, and what is more important, food lasts longer, as each member of the household thus must await another turn for a mouthful.

The aged people say that this method of eating prevents one from overeating, saves him from indigestion and many other stomach ailments, due, they assert, to the use of too many spoons, forks, knives, and too many dishes.

In both towns hats and shoes are considered a superfluous luxury, which may be resorted to only in winter and on holidays. And even on those occasions people often prefer carrying their hats and shoes in their hands to save tear and wear.

Million Miles Her Objective

Elderly Woman Traveller Expects To Make Real Record

An interesting old lady who can probably lay good claim to the title of world's champion traveller is Mrs. Ella G. Munson of West Rockaway, Long Island, who has sailed from Montreal to add the Saguenay district to her list of places visited. Mrs. Munson has travelled close to 700,000 miles and at 72, hopes to bring her total to 1,000,000.

In all her travels, which include 53 trips across the Atlantic and 10 across the Pacific, Mrs. Munson has never encountered a severe storm nor an accident. She has tried almost every known method of transportation, including camels, elephants and rickshaws, but has never yet been in a plane. Only one thing could induce her to fly, she said, and that was an invitation from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to go up with him.

Mrs. Munson's trips are seldom planned in advance. She stays at home until the urge to travel comes, then she packs her trunks and is off. "I can get ready to go around the world in 24 hours," she said.

Mrs. Munson was somewhat at a loss to explain her wanderlust, as her ten brothers and sisters are all "stay-at-home bodies," but though she might have inherited it from Captain John Munson, an ancestor who in 1642 led a pilgrimage of Munsons to Massachusetts.

Looked The Part

He was a golfer who always played in his oldest clothes. One day he set out for the course, his clubs slung over his shoulder.

Walking down a street he saw a woman leaning over her garden gate, eyeing his approach angrily.

"You're very late," she said, sharply, as he drew level.

"Late?" echoed the astonished golfer.

"Yes, late! You promised to sweep my chimney at eight, and it's past nine o'clock now."

A Burden Of Fat Gone

Here is another case where the trim, slim figure of youth has displaced the coarse, fat outline of middle age. It is a housekeeper writing. She says:—

"I cannot say what weight I was, but I was very fat—a burden to myself. I have taken three bottles of Kruschen Salts, and now I am quite slender. I am over 56, and people take me for 40. I am more than proud of myself. You can take it from me that every word of this is true. I took a teaspoonful in hot water every morning till I used three bottles. Now I only take half a teaspoonful each morning. I cannot recommend the Kruschen Salts enough, for they are worth their weight in gold."—Mrs. A. H. Kruschen Salts combat the cause of fat by assisting the internal organs to perform their functions properly—to throw off excess day foods, products and poisons which, if allowed to accumulate, will be converted by the body's chemistry into fatty tissue.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad. Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter. Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. After a party at an exclusive club, where the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the gaiety, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Camilla urges Peter to accept some of her earnings to help him along, but Peter refuses and they quarrel. After Camilla has gone from the studio, Avis Werth calls and persuades Peter to accept a loan of $1,000. Peter finishes his exhibit and takes Avis and Camilla for suggestions as to a name for it. Camilla suggests "Eager Youth," and "Inspiration." Peter adopts the latter title. Camilla, heartbroken, goes to Peter's studio for quiet and to see him. Peter and Avis follow later, and as the lights are turned on, see the statue has been shattered to pieces. Camilla accuses Camilla of doing this, and Camilla, stunned by the disaster, and hurt and horrified by the accusation, faints.

"At Camilla's suggestion, Peter enters as his exhibit a statue he had sculptured especially for her as a wedding gift. They named it "Land of Hope".

"Peter can have all the Paris scholarships he wants—me for the good old green. I only wanted to go to Paris to tide over the depression, anyway. First crack after the exhibit, one of the big money kings buys my 'Flight' and gives me an order to do a larger copy for the entrance to the airport. Then I almost collapsed when fortune threw her arms around me again, and a novelty dealer bought the patents on some little modernistic figures that he will manufacture by thousands to put in the five-and-dime stores. What do you say, is that a break or isn't it?"

Her face lighted with genuine admiration. "Indeed it is, and I'm awfully glad for you. I hate to think that you could do a thing like that to Peter—but since it came out all right, there must have been some reason in the whole plan. I'm glad you told me about it, Gus. I appreciate that it does mean something to me. It would have been a dream to me to have hanging over us for all our lives. But don't be revengeful and petty like that again, will you?" Camilla smiled. "Not on your life. I won't. Me for the straight and narrow—and prosperity."

"I hope it continues for you," she smiled. "You have some fine things in you to develop. I'm sure." "Gee, but you're sweet. Tell you what, I might even write you a statement of confession to show to Peter sometime, if you will promise me to burn it right away after he reads it. I don't care to have incriminating evidence like that around."

"You don't need to do that. If you wish me to tell Peter, I shall. He will believe me, of course. And he will be relieved to know how it happened. I'm sure he never believed that I did it, anyway."

"Well, I'd advise you to keep your eye on Avis Werth."

Camilla laughed with a deprecating gesture. "Avis doesn't worry me. But she did not believe what she said, and when Gus Matson had gone, she sat huddled over her drawing board in abject misery and despair. Her thoughts leaped the expanse of land and ocean which divided them, and she visioned Avis and Peter on the boat together for hours and days.

After a night of restless pacing the decks and turning in his upper berth, Peter emerged to a victory over his emotions. With bitter regret and angry resentment, he had slain love; and now looked upon the results dispassionately. Never again would he give rein to his emotions. Never again could he or would he permit himself to love anyone as he had loved Camilla. Work and success were all that made life worth while, anyway.

He would devote every moment, every effort, every emotion to those elements. He would be hard and cold and grasping like the rest of the world—take what he wanted when he wanted it, accept what pleased his fancy, ignore all obligations to sentiment. He suspected that was the creed of all successful men—and women. Well, he would join their ranks.

He thought of Avis with a mounting sense of appreciation and gratitude. He had her to thank for so many things: his financial security, her influence in his behalf via the interests of John Danforth, even the truth about Camilla's unforgivable act.

Three more days of such stern reasoning and gradual resignation to his new creed had done much for Peter's state of mind. Avis had calmly observed this very obvious change and took advantage of it gradually.

She increased her personal attentions to him; made little intimate ventures which became more pronounced, as the days passed slowly; played upon her conviction that no matter how much a man renounces love, he is the eternal lover and recipient of love, that he cannot subsist without some demonstration of his emotional forces. She flattered and entertained him, exerted herself to be attractive and desirable.

All unconsciously, Peter's attention and ardor transferred themselves to Avis, and almost before he was aware of what was happening, he found himself caught up and hurled along by the mighty force of his desire. Her nervous instability, maddened him; until on that last magic evening of moonlight and sea breeze, when the emotions were strangely alive and alert with the anticipation of the morning's landing, he found his lips pressed to hers, himself holding her intoxicating fragrance in his arms, and all else oblivion.

"But—that man you love," he finally reminded her.

"That man—is you, Peter darling," she confessed.

He was dazed. "Oh—I begin to see light."

She laughed softly. "Dear Peter, you are simply too good to be true. Now that you know—what are you going to do about it?"

"I don't know," he confessed dejectedly.

After a little while, she consoled him. "Oh, well, why think about that now? Tonight is tonight. Tomorrow is another day. Tomorrow, we reach Paris. There is so much to be done. You are going to be very busy. But we can see each other often, and when you are settled, we can have such glorious times together—while we wait." She did not say what they would be waiting for, but it hung in the air between them.

His silence seemed to be an acceptance of her plans.

THE RHYMING
OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

THE MAN WHO DREAMS

Who is so wrong as the man who dreams? Trading the real for the thing which seems. Shaping the days in the mold of his need. Building a world for his whim or his creed?

Who is so foolish, so futile as he, Taking the false for reality? Weakly and cowardly well-content With a toy in place of the world God meant?

Waiting, while months and years slip past, Caught in a net that holds him fast, Snared and bound in the web of dream. Losing the truth of creation's scheme Missing the zest of eager strife, The sick and toll that are part of life. Sucking in triumph art mastery, Who is so cheated and fooled as he?

Pope Plus Gives Up Horses And Closes His Stables

The Papal stables, which once had accommodation for sixty horses, have been finally closed down. Pius XI, his cardinals and prelates, have all taken to motor cars. No more will the streets of Rome ring to the tread of the stately coal-black horses which used to draw the carriages of members of the Sacred College. Sadder of all at the change is the Pope's head coachman, or, as he is entitled to be called, "the Holy Father's noble coachman," 80-year-old Rinaldo Jacchini.

Persia Cleared Of Beggars

Incurable Sent To Institutions And Able-Bodied Must Work

By a ministerial edict all beggars have been swept off the streets of Persian towns and even from the courtyards of mosques where for centuries since Islam entered the country they have begged for alms. The lame, the blind and the insane, have been sent to institutions. The able-bodied have been put to work on the new railroad with the option of going to prison with hard labor for three years. For the work they do they are paid the minimum wage permitted by the state schedule for labor.

Only those who know the East can appreciate the scope of this reform. In Teheran, which has a population of 300,000, there were 22,000 beggars organized into fraternities, guilds and corporations sometimes dating back to the foundation of the city. Islam forbade any interference with beggars on the grounds that alms are the surest road to paradise. The shah had to tread warily for the mosque courtyard was the beggars' chosen pitch, and the precincts of the mosque have always been sanctuary. The sovereign determined to make religion see reason, and therefore persuaded the mujtahid of Isfahan, the highest Moslem dignitary, to send a chaplain to accompany him on an incognito tour of beggary.

The chaplain saw for himself the enormity of the racket. In due course the mujtahid issued his fatwa. "It is good to help the poor. It is evil to rob the poor. The beggars of this town are guilty of robbing the poor and must therefore be driven from the sacred precincts of mosques." The mujtahid, a wise and learned doctor of Islamic law, also ruled that the blind, the lame, and the sick should be treated with respect and consideration as being "afflicted by the most high God." It was not possible to respect them in the public places, and therefore they must be put away and tended.

Under-Sea Experience

Deep Sea Divers Are Blinded By Flashlight Explosion

Blinded for a time by a premature flashlight explosion, two members of the New York Zoological Society's deep-sea expedition spent an uncomfortable five minutes down around the bottom of the sea at Bermuda. For several minutes after the blinding flash Dr. William Beebe and his assistant, Otto Barton, could only grope sightlessly around the interior of the great steel ball in which they had been lowered 1,500 feet below the surface.

Sealed in their bathysphere, they had gone down to take photographs of strange sea monsters at that depth. But a short circuit exploded their four flashlight bulbs simultaneously—instead of singly—and their picture-taking was suspended. By the time the explorers had been hauled back to the surface they had recovered their sight fully and were none the worse for their experience.

An Interesting Bible

Bible students are interested in a 301-year-old Bible owned by C. S. Cooper, of Windsor, Ontario, which has developed a curious quality of faintly discernible luminescence. Containing all books of the Bible, this volume contains the Apocrypha and one of the first concordances ever published. The type used is English script and very different from modern eyes. Mr. Cooper inherited the book from his father, S. Moorehouse Cooper.

Little Helps For This Week

"The Lord bless thee and keep thee; the Lord make his face to shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace." Numbers 6:24-26.

O Love how cheering is Thy ray; All pain before Thy presence flies; Care, anguish, sorrow melt away, Where'er Thy healing beams arise. O Father nothing may I see, Nothing desire or seek but Thee. —P. Gerhardt.

There is a faith in God and a clear perception of His will and designs which gives to its possessor confidence, patience, and a sweet composure under all varied and troubling aspect of events such as no man can realize unless he has felt its influence in his own heart. There is a communion with God in which the soul feels the presence of the unseen One in the profound depths of his own being with a vivid distinctness, and a holy reverence, such as no words can describe. There is a state of union with God, not often reached, but it has been attained in this world, in which all the past, present and future seem reconciled, and eternity is won and enjoyed; and God and man, earth and heaven, with all their agonies are apprehended in truth as they lie in the mind of the Infinite.—Samuel D. Robbins.

The Man In The Moon

Mythical Tenant Of The Lunar Planet Is Photographed

The man in the moon has, posed for his first television snapshot. After smiling down for years into the world's telescope lenses, the mythical tenant of the lunar planet has been photographed by television and the picture transmitted to a radio receiver.

Reprovision of the moon's likeness—the first recorded use of television in astronomy—was announced by Philo T. Farnsworth, 28-year-old inventor-scientist of Philadelphia.
